| Reading Unit: Young Readers Explore the Wide World of Books in their Community | Writing Unit: Launching Writing Workshop |
| Unit Overview: There are three goals for students in this unit: children love reading, children learn how to read, and children learn to build relationships around books. As teachers will welcome students into the world of school they will be confident and think of themselves as readers. They will have authors they love, books they call favorites, and friends to share their experiences. They will explore letters and sounds through the Letterland program and begin to understand how words are used along with pictures to tell stories or teach about new ideas and concepts. | Unit Overview: This unit is designed to introduce kindergarten students to the structure and routines of writing workshop and how to put their thoughts and ideas down on paper using pictures and words. It will begin with helping students come up with a topic, draw it, and then do their best approximation of writing. |
| Reading Unit: Readers Think, Talk and Read in Community | Writing Unit: Kindergarten Personal Narratives: Telling Your Stories in Pictures and Words |
| Unit Overview: In this unit students will grow a deeper understanding of a story, a stronger sense of the language in text, and a desire to want to read themselves. They will think more deeply about characters and plot. They will have private reading time and partner time to have more in depth conversations about what they are thinking when they read books. They will begin to see connections between stories, characters and plots and begin to share these ideas with partners. Students will see how letters and sounds work in isolation but more importantly in text. There is a focus on the difference between letters and words and pointing to words in print when reading. Students will build on their knowledge in Unit 1 by now looking more closely at how the pages of a book go together to tell a whole story. They will come to understand that they can creatively reenact stories in a variety of ways (retells, plays, puppets, etc.) | Unit Overview: This is a three week unit designed to build on the narrative writing kindergarteners have done in the previous unit. |
